RECYCLE POINT

The design of these recycling bins was conceived by 'Chemistry' (www.chemistryteam.com), based on their award winning entry for Design Singapore Council's 10 Touchpoints competition.

The concept was inspired by recognizing that a mindset change towards recycling was needed. By transforming ordinary and functional bins into the recyclable items themselves, the bins become talking points that attract the attention and interest of passengers and visitors to the airport. The inclusion of Changi Airport's recycling efforts on each bin further reinforces that desire to change attitudes and create an emotional connection with people.

Material Design UIs are displayed in an environment that expresses three-dimensional (3D) space using light, surfaces, and cast shadows. All elements in the Material environment move horizontally, vertically, and at varying depths along the z-axis. Depth is depicted by placing elements at various points along the positive z-axis extending towards the viewer.

On the web, the UI expresses 3D space by manipulating the y-axis.
